From the London Times, Oct. 2. English View of Indian Affairs.

The arrival of Indian letters and newspapers puts us in possession of opinions as well as facts. One naturally wishes to know what is thought and felt at one end of the wire, or other line of communication, while war facts once announced, there is not much to satisfy impatience in the speculations, the rumors, or the gossip even at the very seat of government. Many a tourist has found that at Geneva or Berne he was to all practical purposes no nearer the Alps than in Whitehall or Cheapide; and it would seem as if people were no nearer Delhi and Lucknow at Bombay and Calcutta, than we are ments of our political organization, are utterly void. at home. Their conjectures are little less wild. They seem almost equally condemned to be idle bystanders, when every feeling would prompt the quickets and most vigorous interference. Anglo-Indian opinion, however, has evidently entered a new stage, though one not without precedent. Some of the finer, more subtle, and more terturing questions that occupied it at first, have now answered themselves. Of seventy regiments not ene is now left to foster the fond illusion of its fidelity. till the as truths of the times, and venture the impartial fidelity (Daily Iowa State Gazette. happy moment for the bullet or the "tulwar" to do its of "The Sun" upon what we assert, satisfied that all appointed work. It must begin in September and end in May. after which month it seems taken for granted that not a shot will be fired. Passing, then, over the preliminary the prospects of the war. They think that we shall have a succession of triumphs, and that next spring will find us holding India with a stronger grasp than we ever did before. Strangely enough, this conviction betrays itself at the very time that the arrival of the English mail brings what seems there an immense underrating of the mutiny. We believe that on this point they are mistaken. The statements and estimates made, in or out of Parliament, to the best of our recollection, simply reflected from time to time the latest news from India. It was nobody's business here to anticipate worse than was known, and reinforcements were despatched, if not quite as expeditiously as if the worst had been known, as expeditiously as anything is ever done in this country. The military estimate, then, taken at Calcutta looks rather to the reserve than to the forces engaged, and rather to the surrounding country than to the actual seat of war. Even the prospect of reverses in the present battlefield, and the interruption of communications, does not seem to concern them as much as might be suppos-At Calcutta they are safe. The arrival of the Chinese force, the sight of the Shannon in their river, the passage of several regiments up the river, and, above all, the departure of Captain Peel, with 400 Brithish sailors and ten 68-pounders, make them feel as secure as we do at home. The arrival of Sir Colin Campbell, a commander-in-chief, with real power, replacing Sir P. Grant, who, as an Indian officer, had responsibility without power, contributed to this comfortable feeling. At all events, the tide of war seemed to be rolling up the Ganges, and every wave of it would drive further inwards the mutineers of Dinapore, who have created so much alarm; of Ranghur, on the very borders of Bengal proper; of Oude, and the whole valley of the Ganges .-Looking at the other extremity of the disturbed line, the state of things at Delhi was so encouraging that we felt ouselves justified in calling it the other day the bright spot in our Indian prospects; but at Calcutta they were even more sanguine, and fully expected, on the 23d of August, that the assault had already taken place when it was supposed the mutineers would be dispersed and a large part of the besieging force would be available for the relief of the Lucknow, and the conquest of Oude .-The tables had so far been turned on the mutineers that time was in our favor. Every week was adding several thousands to our force, and the idea of a Sikh invasion of Hindostan under the British flag was so popular in the Punjab, that there appeared to be no limits to the accession of strength from that quarter. In Delhi all was confusion, dissension, desertion, want of powder, percussion caps, money, men, and food. The king was most uncomfortable in his quarters, our artillery having found his majesty's range. The Mahommedans and Hindoos were quarrelling for the use of the water tanks. All was greatly discouraged by the uniform defeat of the recent sorties. In this extremity the question was whither to go-whether to consult discretion by going down the Delhi side of the Sumna, or to take the more valorous course of crossing the river by the bridge of boats, and making for Oude. In either ease it would be strange if we did not follow them up, and indict that chastisement which they now avoid under the shelter of walls and streets. As far as can be inferred from the description of our camp before Delhi, and the bodies of bregulars flocking to our aid from the Punjab, Cashmere, Kumaon, and Nepaul, we are much better prepared for open warfare than the garrison of Delhi, with no other " tower of strength " than their " King's name."

The probability is that the more desperate and deeply committed of the mutineers, driven out of Delhi, would swarm in the direction of Oude. It is vain at this distance, and this day, to speculate on the fate of Lucknow, which, be it well or ill, is now a thing of the past. Even the garrison, with its precious and helpless charge, for a junction against a bank without previous notice. at Calcutta they had had no direct and certain news of whole month. It was supposed that General Outram would attempt to relieve the place by going up the Gogra or the Goomtee, which might be a necessary change of route, but serves to show the time required for the task. But, whatever the result, there will then be simply two armies in the field. Agra, at least, we assume to be safe, as it is no longer mentioned with anxiety, and is said not even to be invested. Certain points, such as Allahabad, will then be held for military purposes but otherwise it will be a simple, ordinary case of two armies in the field, depending for success on their spirit, their numbers, reinforcements, supplies, and the goodwill of the population. We feel no question that in all these points, except, possibly, the numbers actually brought into action, we have the best of it. We have all first, this is not a rebellion, or even an insurrection; it is | most instantaneous relief.—Daily Enterprise. only a mutiny. M. centuries. The mischief is almost confined to the soldiers, unless it be an accession of credit and strength to their cause that the criminals they release from the gaols, and the ruffians of every town held them to plunder and destroy. But, on the whole ; with rare and accountable exceptions, the people are in our favor, and as the war proceeds will be so more and more. Every day the war will be confined to a still closer compass, and with Bengal, the sub-Himalayan countries, the Punjab, and Central India on our side, shall crush the mutiny, we fully expect, before next summer.

ruled inactive, and there has been scarcely anything done. The arrivals of State brands during the week have been meagre, and as holders have not pressed the market with parcels for sale prices remain unchanged. There is only a limited enquiry from retailers, and in the absence of sales worthy of note, our quotations may be looked upon as merely nominal. We quote from store as follows : Cross $4 75 a $5 ; Fine $5 25 a $5 50 ; Superfine $5 75 a $6, and Family $6 25 a $6 50 $2 bbl., in lots. FEATHERS .- Demand limited, and supply moderate. We quote from store at 45 a 50 cents & B., as in quality.

GRAIN-CORN-Owing to the limited arrivals for some weeks past, the stock on market has become very much reduced, and we note rather more enquiry from dealers. A cargo of 1500 bushels was received on Saturday, and has gone into store. On Wednesday 1,850 bushels were received, but has not yet been sold .- OATS-No late receipts, and the supply on market has been materially reduced; in moderate demand. In the absence of sales, we quote nominally at 40 a 42 cents P bushel, as in quality. PEAS-No Cow received for several weeks, and the market is entirely bare. We note some demand ;-a lot of any moment would hardly bring more than 75 a 85 cents & bushel. These prices, however, can hardly be considered a fair criterion of the marke,, as rates a shade higher might be got for small parcels. - Rice-Nothing new to note in the market for clean. Moderate supply in store, and no demand except from the trade-small sales at 5 a 51 cents & B., as in quality .---- WHEAT-The arrivals have been exceedingly small for some weeks past, and there is none now offering on market. We note some enquiry, and quote at $1 a $1 05 for red, and $1 10 a $1 15 for white. A lot of 220 bushels prime white sold on Tuesday at $1 171 @ bushel.

LIMB-Is in moderate stock, and we notice merely a retail demand. Selling in the small way from store at $1 25 a Molasses .- Nothing of consequence doing. We note a fair supply of New Orleans and Cuba in store, with only small sales at prices ranging within quotations, as in quantity and quality. See table.

POTATOES-Irish are in light stock, and demand moderate. Sell from store at $3 37% a $3 50 % bbl. Very few Sweet have been brought in during the week, and prices range from 70 to 90 cents & bushel, as in quality. Provisions-The market is very poorly supplied, and prices role exceedingly high. In N. C. cured Bacon we have nothing to note in the way of sales, as none has been received, and the market is entirely bare. There is a brisk demand, and parcels would find ready purchasers at high rates. Little or no Western has been received, and the quantity on market is confined to a few small lots in retailmerely nominal for both descriptions. LARD-There appears to be but a limited demand for either N. C. or Western make, as retailers have suffic ent on hand for their immediate wants. We quote at 17 cents ₽ fb. in kegs and bbls. CHEESE Is very scarce, and in active enquiry. We quote at 12 a 121 cents # fb. PORK-In the absence of receipts during the past week the stock of Northern has become all worked off, and there is none in first hands. See

SALT-No receipts since our last review. Both Liverpool ground and Alum is in full stock, and selling in the small way at quotations. See table.

SHINGLES AND STAVES-Only a few small parcels brought in, and no sales worthy of note. See table. TIMBER-Remains without material alteration; demand imited. Only three or four rafts have been brought in du-ing the week and sold at quotations. See table. FREIGHTS--Continue to rule decidedly dull. Country produce has arrived sparingly, and there is a large number of vessels now in port waiting. Quotations are difficult to ob-
